

How To Make Flip Book

1. To begin, select something you want to see move. For example, birds, bats, planes, butterflies, and stick figures lend themselves to this type of drawing. Plan how you want the drawing to move.
2. Think about how the motion will start, and how it will end. The action may need just a few pages or many pages.
3. Draw the first and last pictures before you start. Each drawing will move the action from the bottom drawing to the top. If your final drawing does not match the top exactly, you may discard the top sheet.

4. Draw or trace the next drawing on the next blank page on top of the drawing you just did. Work from the bottom page of the pad toward the top page. Then you can see the previous drawing. If not, you can flip the upper page every so often to compare the drawings.

5. You must color the drawings when you are finished. When the finished drawings are flipped, the image seems to move, because each drawing advances the motion slightly from page to page. How much movement you draw from page to page comes best by practice.

6. Once you are finished – Play and enjoy!

Hint: Faster motion needs less drawings. Slower motion needs more drawings.
